

FUTURE OF HIGHER EDUCATION

Policy, Pedagogy and the Student Experience

Edited by Les Bell, Howard Stevenson and Michael Neary

"Many congratulations to the Centre for Educational Research and Development at the University of Lincoln for producing an upbeat book about the future of higher education which is scholarly, original, exciting and practical. It is an important contribution to the debate about what higher education should and could be like."

Dr. Monica McLean, Reader and Assistant Professor in Higher Education, University of Nottingham

"'Learning landscapes' amid 'the stretched academy': with ideas such as these, this volume brings fresh thinking to our sense as to the future of higher education... This is a volume to which I shall be returning."

The Future of Higher Education explores policy, pedagogy and the student experience at a conceptual level, enabling university staff to place their own work within a wider theoretical framework and to develop their own understandings of some of the key controversies that surround teaching and learning in higher education.

Part 1 explores key policies that have shaped higher education since the late twentieth century, and traces the impact that these policies have had on the extent and nature of higher education provision.

Part 2 explores how these emerging policies, and the need for higher education institutions to respond to them, have produced a radical re-evaluation of what higher education is and how it might best be delivered at an institutional level.

Part 3 gives consideration to pedagogy and the student experience in contemporary higher education.

The Future of Higher Education will be invaluable to all university staff, especially those following the PGCertHE and other programmes within institutional CPD frameworks. It will also be of interest to researchers in this field.
