

Historians and Archivists in conversation

Twitter chat: Thursday 9 July at 2pm (BST)

History UK and The National Archives have teamed up to co-host a Twitter chat that asks how historians and archivists can work together in a COVID landscape. We invite members of the History and Archives communities to join the discussion.

We will release the following questions on Thursday 9 July at 2pm (BST):

1. How can we recreate the excitement of archival discoveries in our own homes?
2. What are the best tools and technologies for showcasing archival material to a virtual audience?
3. How can we make virtual sessions using archival material accessible to all students?
4. How can we support students who cannot access archives for their research?
5. What ethical issues and representation biases are there with digitised archival collections, and how do we counter these in a COVID-19 landscape?
6. How can archivists and historians keep their teaching and research collaborations going in a COVID-19 landscape?
7. How should we evaluate student learning / engagement with archival material online?

We will be using the hashtag #HUKTNAconvo

The hosts for the chat will be:

@history_uk	@UKNatArcSector	@UKNatArcRes
-------------	-----------------	--------------